GEOLOGICAL SCIENCES

C GLY 4930 CN# DEPT Tropical Ecology/Yucatan Brenner 3 TBA

Overseas Study class that present an overview of the ecology of the Yucatan Peninsula and focus on long-term interactions between humans and the environment in the region.

The combined courses, “Tropical Ecology” (3 credits) and “Humans and the Environment of the Yucatan Peninsula” (2 credits) present an overview of the ecology of the Yucatan Peninsula and focus on long-term interactions between humans and the environment in the region. Classes are taught in English by faculty members from University of Florida and the Department of Veterinary Medicine and Animal Science at the Autonomous University of Yucatan (UADY). Classes are held Monday through Wednesday. The classes provide background in ecology and explore ecosystems on the peninsula in southeastern Mexico. Among the topics covered: physical geography, climate and karst geology, Maya culture and ethnecology, paleoecology, freshwater ecosystems (cenotes, lakes, rivers), coastal saline lagoons and mangroves, marine reefs and beaches, vegetation types and plant diversity (low and high forest), and wildlife management areas. Field excursions are scheduled for Thursday-Saturday/Sunday. There are field trips to caves, cenotes, lakes, springs, coastal mangroves, salt ponds, Caribbean beaches and reefs, offshore islands, low and high forest, indigenous agricultural systems, and Maya archaeological sites. In past years we have seen monkeys, crocodiles, sea turtles, boa constrictors, flamingoes, and other wildlife. The major goal of the course is to provide students with an overview of tropical ecosystems in a field setting, enable them to see how people live in this landscape, and make students aware of the environmental challenges that this tropical region faces. The class is combined with Spanish language classes (3 credits) offered at multiple levels, which are taught by UADY faculty members. The classes are open to graduate and undergraduate students and there are no prerequisites. All GLY students receive a packet of bound readings that supplement information provided in lectures. Each student must bring a camera/phone on field excursions and take photographs that illustrate ecological principles covered in class. Students give short group presentations in class the following week, highlighting their field experiences and using the photos to reinforce concepts discussed in class.
