This workshop will introduce interested students to the general and practical issues around internship, fellowship and job opportunities at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum. Krista Hegburg (Ph.D. in anthropology, Columbia University) and Emil Kerenji (Ph.D. in history, University of Michigan) will also speak about their own academic trajectories and experiences of working in a non-university setting.

Krista Hegburg is a Program Officer in the Division of International Academic Programs of the Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum. In that capacity, she runs the Mandel Center’s Summer Research Workshop program, international programs in Eastern Europe, and programs for scholars from the Global South.

Emil Kerenji is an Applied Research Scholar at the Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum. He is a historian of modern Jewish and East European History. He authored and co-authored several Holocaust Jewish source volumes at the Holocaust Museum, and published several articles in the field.
