Welcome to the IV International Symposium on Languages for Specific Purposes (ISLSP) / CIBER Business Language Conference!

Dear Conference Participants:

Welcome to the fourth joint International Symposium on Languages for Specific Purposes (ISLSP) and CIBER Business Language conference at the University of Florida. This year’s theme is LSP Vectors: Strengthening Interdisciplinary Connections, and focuses on how we can advance the field of LSP to better prepare our students for the global workplace.

On behalf of the organizing committee, I thank our co-sponsors: 17 USDOE funded CIBERs, the UF Center for Latin American Studies, the UF International Center, the UF Department of Spanish & Portuguese Studies, the American Association of Teachers of French, and the Florida Foreign Language Association. I am also grateful for the support from the ISLSP Organizing Committee: Mary Long, Sheri Spaine Long, Lourdes Sánchez-López, Barbara Lafford, Michael Doyle, and Mike Shealy.

Finally, I would like to recognize Graduate Assistant, Erika Davis and Communications Specialist, Patricia Alba, for all their work and support with event logistics and marketing.

While your time is short here, I hope you are able to experience a little UF campus life in addition to connecting with LSP colleagues. I recommend the following:

• Krishna Lunch: Served at the Plaza of the Americas in the center of campus.
• Latin American and Caribbean Collection: Top-ranked library collection with approximately 500,000 volumes and other resources, located in the Smathers Library.
• Lake Alice/Bat Houses: Located on Museum Road, see the hundreds of thousands of bats that come out on warm evenings after sunset and maybe catch a glimpse of a gator at the lake.

Sincerely,

Mary E. Risner

Abstract:
The current shifts in U.S. national and foreign policy and their impact on transnational migrants and global political and economic alliances call for a reconsideration of the scope and objectives of Languages for Specific Purposes (LSP). Beyond the need for teaching profession-specific vocabulary, LSP educators must consider the broader professional applications and social implications of LSP. To this end, this roundtable addresses emergent trends and future directions in the teaching and development of socially responsive LSP.

SESSIONS AT A GLANCE

SATURDAY | FEBRUARY 24
10:00 - 10:45 AM  CHAMBER  SESSION 1

Elements of an Intermediate Spanish Course on Law Enforcement
Presented by: Susana Cisneros and Chance A. Williams
Institutions: Department of Language and Culture Studies and The University of North Carolina at Charlotte
Moderator: Crystal Marull, University of Florida

The presenters will describe the five main axes around which the course is articulated: 1) knowledge of Spanish grammar, 2) a balanced mix of general vocabulary, some slang and specific legal terminology, 3) knowledge about cultural backgrounds of Latinos in general, 4) hands-on experiences, and 5) an instructor trained in law enforcement.

TRACK: LSP program development and implementation

10:00 - 10:45 AM  ROOM G315  SESSION 2

Creating a Bilingual Campus at a Polytechnical Institute in West Africa
Presented by: Steven J. Sacco
Institutions: Sacco Global Consulting
Moderator: Deb Reisinger, Duke University

The presenter will describe ongoing efforts to create a bilingual English-French campus at a polytechnical institute in French-speaking West Africa. These efforts include forming a partnership with multinational corporations (MNCs), designing bilingual French-English engineering, business and agriculture courses, and ESL training for faculty. The rationale for this move is to meet the growing demand by MNCS for bilingual English and French-speaking engineers, managers and technicians operating in Ivory Coast and other Francophone countries.

TRACK: LSP in different regions of the world

10:00 - 10:45 AM  ROOM 2325  SESSION 3

Debunking Cuba: Importing the Island into the Business Language Classroom
Presented by: Grant Gearhart
Institutions: Georgia Southern University-Armstrong Campus in Savannah
Moderator: Alberto Fernández, University of Florida

Within the context of sharing my experiences participating in the 2017 CIBER Faculty Development in International Business seminar in Havana (through the University of Maryland), I will provide concrete examples of activities and assessments for business language courses that promote cultural awareness while applying business strategies in the target language.

TRACK: Domain-specific language use (STEM, business, law, medicine, translation, etc.)
MOOCs for LSP: A Case Study of a Spanish Language Massive Open Online Course (MOOC) for Traveling
Presented by: Beatriz Sedano Cuevas
Institutions: Universidad Nacional de Educación a Distancia (UNED)
Moderator: Nathalie Ciesco, University of Florida

Colpaert, 2016; Rubio et al., 2016; Teixeira & Mota, 2014 point out that a main benefit of MOOCs for language teaching is the opportunity to bring together geographically isolated learners with different backgrounds to create a genuine community of practice to carry out real-world tasks (Council of Europe, 2002). This study shows design and implementation of a Spanish LMOOC in tourism. It was created taking the traveller’s communicative point of view, following the CEFR’s (Common European Framework of Reference) Action-oriented approach (Council of Europe, 2002) and is based on an exhaustive needs analysis.

Ways of Teaching Languages for Special Purposes
Presented by: Maida Watson, Beatriz Muller Marquez, Anna Cepeda, Jennifer Fernandez, Primavera Cuder, Claudia Battistel
Institutions: Florida International University
Moderator: Robert Quinn, Quality Translation Services

This roundtable discusses topics related to the organization of LSP courses such as concentrating on one or various professions, including experiential learning, using task based organization, including elements of research in language attitudes, and teaching languages for special purposes online.

TRACK: Professional development models for practicing educators

Coursework Transformation: Preparing Language Students for the Future
Presented by: Frédérique Grim
Institutions: Colorado State University
Moderator: Elizabeth Barbour, Global SKILLS

For smaller departments, an alternative to full LSP courses is to integrate some of their characteristics into a general curriculum such as a composition course. This presentation will share how a department undertook the redesign of a set of fundamental courses to add a LSP emphasis in the hopes of attracting more students.

Hybrid/Online Business Portuguese Class Business Language Research and Training (BLRT)
Presented by: Eduardo Viana Da Silva
Institutions: University of Washington
Moderator: Emily Bagienski, Indiana University
This research shows the results of a survey on the need of an online/hybrid business Portuguese class. The survey was conducted with over 100 participants, including university students and professionals in the Seattle area.

TRACK: Business language

Presented by: Margaret Gonglewski and Anna Helm
Institutions: George Washington University
Moderator: Christine Everett, Indiana University
This session presents guidelines for designing service-learning projects with a business language/culture focus. Presenters unveil an online module based on a project in their Business German and International Marketing courses, where student teams did service-learning with a community partner. Module highlights project examples and advice on maximizing transferable skills.

Articulating Augmented Reality into the LSP Online Curriculum: Spanish for Healthcare Professionals
Presented by: Andrés Jiménez, Barbara Lafford, and Peter Lafford
Institutions: Arizona State University
Moderator: Lourdes Sánchez-López, University of Alabama at Birmingham
This presentation reports on the integration of an augmented reality (AR) project (created with a Ricoh Theta S camera to capture 360° panoramic views) into an online advanced course on Spanish for Healthcare Professionals. The authors will discuss the affordances and limitations of this AR environment for teaching LSP courses.

How Can Language for Specific Purposes Courses Enhance the Study Abroad Experience?
Presented by: Marlee Stein and Benay Stein
Institutions: Associated Colleges of the Midwest and Northwestern University
Moderator: Mike Shealy, University of South Carolina

This session will begin with the first presenter’s research study findings and recommendations on content-based foreign language courses taught at U.S. higher education institutions and how they can play a role in students’ preparation for, and experience in, a language immersion study abroad program. The second presenter will build upon the specific pedagogical practices, thematic and instructional focus required to align this interdisciplinary model with student success in study abroad. Examples of specific linguistic, cultural, and critical thinking skills will demonstrate how LSP coursework can enhance the study abroad experience.

TRACK: LSP integration through study abroad, internships

Lessons Learned: Integrating Medical French into the French Studies Curriculum
Presented by: E. Nicole Meyer
Institutions: Augusta University
Moderator: Carmen King de Ramírez, University of Arizona

This presentation addresses a rationale and methodology for teaching French for Health and Medical Professions, helps faculty define their goals for teaching it, and why one would take it. Personalizing the course to student interests, textbook choice, easily accessible resources, service-learning and creative active-learning approaches are also shared.

TRACK: Domain-specific language use (STEM, business, law, medicine, translation, etc.)

Doing Business in Quebec: Transcreation vs. Marketing Translation
Presented by: Elizabeth Martin
Institutions: California State University, San Bernardino
Moderator: Margaret Dempster, Northwestern University

“Doing Business in Quebec” explores techniques used for translating and adapting advertisements for the Quebec market. A recent study of Quebec advertising (Martin, 2016), supplemented by interviews with advertising agency and media executives, reveals how global brands are tailoring their messages to Quebecers, recognizing their unique socio-cultural characteristics.

TRACK: Domain-specific language use (STEM, business, law, medicine, translation, etc.)

Virtual Exchange: Helping Students Learn Together
Presented by: Henry Shepherd
Institutions: Aspen Institute, Stevens Initiative
Moderator: Alexis Gaul, George Washington University

Virtual exchange – sustained, online, international education programs – can give a generation of young people the skills they need to succeed in an interconnected and tumultuous world. The Stevens Initiative, a partnership supported by the Department of State, Bezos Family Foundation, and others, will explain how other educators can use technology to give students the opportunity to build language and other critical skills.

TRACK: Telecollaboration, online and distance learning for LSP purposes
Crucial yet Overlooked: Up-dating the Grammatical Content of Language Learning Materials
Presented by: Robert A. Quinn
Institutions: Quality Translations LLC (retired Professor of Spanish)
Moderator: Mary Vasilevsky, University of Florida

Researchers have inadvertently neglected the fundamental need of adults acquiring an L2: up-to-date, easily-remembered grammatical content. Especially beneficial for those writing career-oriented materials, this presentation provides and illustrates recent improvements from cognitive psychology, linguistics, and L2 acquisition theory. It reveals an unexpected discovery that opens new perspectives for LSP progress.

TRACK: Theoretical and methodological issues of LSP research

Maximizing “Classtime” with Computer Mediated Tools
Presented by: Geraldine Lebaudy
Institutions: University of Pennsylvania
Moderator: Mary Vasilevsky, University of Florida

This session will demonstrate ways of using Computer Mediated Tools such as Canvas Quizzes and Voiceover powerpoints to flip the classroom and thus maximize class time. Presenter will provide examples of content units and tasks to show how to integrate and implement them so that students of all levels can achieve business language objectives through real world examples.

Swahili Business Language 2.0: An Online Learning Resource for Swahili Business Language (BLRT)
Presented by: William Kanyi Wamathai
Institutions: Indiana University
Moderator: Christine Everett, Indiana University

Swahili Business Language 2.0 project explores ways for educators in less commonly taught languages to develop and design learning materials for language for specific purposes using Open Educational Resources platforms.

Between Monolingual and Bilingual: Student Learning Outcomes in an Online Intermediate Spanish in the Professions Course
Presented by: Annie Abbott
Institutions: University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign
Moderator: Christine Everett, Indiana University

Although many departments offer LSP courses to attract more students, students often have underdeveloped notions about the value of language study for their careers. I will present modules from an online, fourth-semester Spanish for the Professions course that explicitly demonstrate the value (and challenges) of intermediate language proficiency in any job.

Teaching Interpreting to the Undergraduate: Language Skills, Career Builder, and Social Justice
Presented by: Robin Ragan
Institutions: Knox College
Moderator: Barbara Domcekova, Birmingham-Southern College

With the recent push in higher education to offer students more career-oriented courses, Modern Languages programs have begun offering LSPs. Courses on language interpreting, however, are still rare. I will discuss course design and unexpected outcomes by reviewing my recent experience teaching this course at a small, liberal arts college.

Selling French: A Project-Based Learning Case Study
Presented by: Deb Reisinger
Institutions: Duke University
Moderator: Barbara Domcekova, Birmingham-Southern College

Presenter will share results from a 3-year marketing project. Students in this 5th semester French course are tasked with developing a marketing campaign for the French language. The project incorporates LSP pedagogies and current marketing and branding strategies to capture student attitudes that have ultimately informed departmental policy.

More than a Simple “Bonjour”: Targeted Language Preparation for International Programs
Presented by: Jody L. Ballah
Institutions: University of Cincinnati Blue Ash College
Moderator: Raluca Romaniuc, George Mason University

This presentation will discuss three international student programs which combined the study of social issues with basic language preparation in French in order for students to engage more meaningfully with the local population. Students travelled to Haiti, Guadeloupe and France to engage in service projects and conduct research.

TRACK: Experiential learning
French Connections with Business, History, Sociology and Economics
Presented by: Catherine Savell
Institutions: Loyola University Maryland
Moderator: Raluca Romaniuc, George Mason University

A French course potentially offers interesting connections to other disciplines. This presentation will give an example of a social entrepreneurship discovery project that links Language, Business, History, Sociology and Economics and can easily be integrated in a course, enabling students to tap into wider interests.

LSP Business Program: The Value of the Internship
Presented by: Salvador Oropesa
Institutions: Clemson University
Moderator: Alexis Gaul, George Washington University

Since its inception academic year 1988 the LSP Business program at Clemson has graduated 1,120 students. Following Beemer (2016), a study on the relationship between internships and employment, we studied the difference between doing the internship abroad or in an international company in the US.

Discipline-specific or Not?: Further Exploration on Community-based Learning in LSP Programs
Presented by: Lourdes Sánchez-López
Institutions: University of Alabama at Birmingham
Moderator: Elizabeth Barbour, Global SKILLs

LSP scholars identify Community-based learning (CBL) as an essential piece of LSP programs and a top research priority, calling for its “normalization” within the curriculum. Is a discipline-specific CBL completely necessary to fulfill LSP program objectives, or in contrast would a general CBL work just as well? Results of this study may help further understand the role of CBL within LSP programs.

Infusing STEM in World Language Instruction (Examples K-12, higher ed, German)
Presented by: Nancy Decker and Deborah Horzen
Institutions: Rollins College and Cypress Creek High School
Moderator: Mary Vasilevsky, University of Florida

STEM has become a widespread topic of conversation of language acquisition professionals. The American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL) in its 2013 Position Statement affirms: “Project- or problem-based language learning with STEM content develops problem-solving, critical thinking, and inquiry skills.” This session will share some model activities implemented in K-8 contexts using examples in German.

Business Arabic: A New Method of Teaching Arabic Oriented for Business Students
Presented by: Ghayda Al-Ali
Institutions: Georgetown University
Moderator: Emily Bagienski, Indiana University

Business Arabic explores the language of Arabic business as used in readings, correspondence, and documents. Business Arabic will be a functional vehicle to gain knowledge and experience in real-life business applications of Arabic language vocabulary, structure and functionality. Its aim is to provide students with the basic cross-cultural understanding, and the accuracy in spoken and written communication necessary to effectively participate in the Arabic speaking business world. Course content includes exploration of the methods, vocabulary and techniques of Arabic language communications in finance, marketing, and general commercial transactions.

Triumphs, Trials, and Tribulations: A LSP Program Story
Presented by: Dawn Slack
Institutions: Kutztown University
Moderator: Regina Range, University of Alabama-Tuscaloosa

This presentation focuses on the successes and pitfalls of developing and sustaining languages for specific purposes (LSP) courses/programs. Various aspects are considered, from initial planning stages to ongoing advocacy. While samples are from a Spanish for Modern Business program, the underlying concepts are adaptable to a range of LSP courses.

Integrated Curriculum Design: Outcomes of a Two-Week Spanish Intensive Course for Nursing Students of Various Spanish Abilities
Presented by: María E. Pérez
Institutions: University of Houston
Moderator: William Flores, Southern Connecticut State University
This study analyzes the outcome of an intensive Spanish course for nursing students of various Spanish language abilities. The course objectives were to enable the students to conduct a nursing assessment interview and data gathering in Spanish, as well as providing instructions for vital signs and a head to toe physical exam. Treating these interactions as fairly structured communicative frames, utilizing Goffman’s schema, guided the course development. Vocabulary and grammar was restricted to the needs of the assigned tasks, and concentrated on speaking and receptive abilities, not on writing or reading.

CALL FOR CONFERENCE PAPERS

LSP Vectors: Strengthening Interdisciplinary Connections (2019)

We invite proposals for consideration in the publication of LSP Vectors: Strengthening Interdisciplinary Connections (2019). The volume will contain selected original articles based on presentations given at the Fourth International Symposium on Languages for Specific Purposes (ISLSP)/CIBER Business Language event held at the University of Florida.

The theme of ISLSP 2018 is “Strengthening Interdisciplinary Connections”. The purpose of LSP Vectors: Strengthening Interdisciplinary Connections (2019; ISBN pending) is to share innovation in LSP research, practice, and program development. Manuscript submissions will be anonymous peer-reviewed.

Guidelines for Manuscript Submission

• The deadline for manuscript submissions is July 15, 2018.
• Submissions should be sent to maryr@ufl.edu with subject line: “SUBMISSION TO LSP-AUTHOR’S LAST NAME.” Authors will receive a receipt confirmation within 48 hours of submission.
• Manuscripts must be original (not previously published and not under consideration for publication elsewhere).
• Manuscripts should be ready for anonymous review, so all author names and institutions should be removed from the article and included in a separate cover page.
• Manuscripts should comply with APA style (http://www.apastyle.org/).
• Writing specifications: Times New Roman font; 12 point font size; double space; abstract: 150-200 words; 5-8 key words; page numbers
• Accepted documents: Word documents (no PDFs, please).
• Language: Manuscripts must be written in English.
• Authors will retain copyright.
