Course description: In this course we will study the ideas of some important Latin American thinkers whose work has helped to shape Latin American history and society from Independence in the early 19th Century to the present. Even though special attention will be paid to some writers, works by a larger number of intellectuals will be analyzed as a way of understanding some of the central ideas in Latin American culture: “mestizaje,” nationalism and popular culture, among others. Essays – in a very broad sense of the term – historical documents, and even a poem will be the medium used to explore these pivotal concepts.

Texts:

Evaluation for undergraduate students.
1. There will be three take-home exams during the semester. (See course schedule for dates.) The first two exams must be returned in class; the third one will be placed in the professor’s mail box. No exam should be sent by electronic mail. Lateness will affect the grade for the exam. Each exam will count as 25% of the final grade.

2. All undergraduate students will do a brief oral presentation (10 minutes) on one of the assigned texts. By the second day of classes the students will select the text that he/she will introduce. Once the text is assigned there cannot not be changes on the date of the presentation. This presentation will count as 10% of the final grade.

3. Students are expected to complete all assigned readings for the day they are assigned. Attendance and class participation will constitute 15% of the final grade. Students can be absent once during the semester. 5% of the attendance and participation component will be deducted for any further absence Evaluation for graduate students.

1. Students are expected to complete all assigned readings for the day they are assigned. Attendance and class participation will constitute 10% of the final grade. Students can be absent once during the semester. 5% of the attendance and participation component will be deducted for any further absence.

2. All graduate students will give an oral presentation (30 minutes long) in class. This will constitute 30% of the final grade. The topics and dates for the presentations appear in the course program, at the end of each date. Students should notify the professor by the end of the first meeting of their choices since these will be honored if the circumstances permit so. Topics will be assigned then for those graduate students attending the first meeting. Time limits will be strictly observed. Students may use any audio-visual aids in their presentation. They are strongly urged to distribute a handout with a bibliography if they are not using Power Point. Students must provide the professor when they do their oral presentation with the bibliography (annotated) which was used for it.

3. A 12 to 15-page research paper on a specific theme related to the class topic is the last requirement for the course. This will count as 60% of the final grade. By March 22nd students must submit the topic of the final paper and a preliminary bibliography for approval. The final paper is due (in my mailbox in the Center for Latin American Studies) by 1 PM on April 28th.

Academic Honesty Guidelines
Department of Romance Languages and Literatures
University of Florida

Academic honesty and integrity are fundamental values of the University community. An academic honesty offense is defined as the act of lying, cheating, or stealing academic information so that one gains academic advantage. Any individual who becomes aware of a violation of the Honor Code is bound by honor to take corrective action.

Violations of the Academic Honesty Guidelines include but are not limited to:

Cheating. The improper taking or tendering of any information or material which shall be used to determine academic credit. Taking of information includes copying graded homework assignments from another student; working with another individual(s) on graded assignments or homework; looking or attempting to look at notes, a text, or another student's paper during an exam.

Plagiarism. The attempt to represent the work of another as the product of one's own thought, whether the other's work is oral or written (including electronic), published or unpublished. Plagiarism includes, but is not limited to, quoting oral or written materials without citation on written materials or in oral presentations; submitting work produced by an on-line translation service or the translation feature of an on-line dictionary as your own.

Misrepresentation. Any act or omission with intent to deceive a teacher for academic advantage. Misrepresentation includes lying to a teacher to increase your grade; lying or misrepresenting facts when confronted with an allegation of academic honesty.
Bribery, Conspiracy, Fabrication. For details see website below.

The UF Honor Code states: We, the members of the University of Florida community, pledge to hold ourselves and our peers to the highest standards of honesty and integrity. On all work submitted for credit the following pledge is either required or implied:

On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid in doing this assignment.

Violations of this policy will result in disciplinary action according to the judicial process.
